

Marcia W. DiStaso, Ph.D., APR (University of Miami 2007), is an Associate Professor and Chair of the Public Relations Department at the University of Florida. She is a leader in research on digital/social media and financial communication/investor relations, and is widely known and respected for her distinguished career in research, teaching, and service. She won the 2016 Public Relations Society of America (PRSA) Educator of the Year Award, the 2019 PRNEWS Measurement Hall of Fame, and a Silver Anvil and MarCom Awards. She serves as the Director for the Institute for Public Relations Digital Media Research Center and was the 2016-17 co-chair of the Commission on Public Relations Education. For ten years, she worked as a faculty member at Penn State University and as a research consultant. In 2017, she came to the University of Florida to run one of the largest Public Relations programs in the US.